As identified in the current Fund prospectus, the gross expense ratio was 0.98% and the net expense ratio was 0.70%. Clarkston Capital Partners has limited certain expenses of the Fund since inception and has contractually agreed to limit certain expenses of the Fund through at least January 31, 2020. The Fund's total returns would have been lower if Clarkston Capital Partners had not limited expenses during those periods.

Performance data quoted represents past performance. Past performance does not guarantee future results. Investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate so that an investor's shares, when sold or redeemed, may be worth more or less than the original cost. Market Overview and Fund Attribution

We have exercised extreme patience in making investments for the Clarkston Fund's portfolio, and our strict adherence to our "quality value" investment philosophy has resulted in cash allocations reaching approximately ten percent in the Fund. We reiterate this is not a market call; rather our inability to find quality businesses at what we consider to be attractive valuations.

The equity markets were volatile last year, especially in the fourth quarter. We took advantage of lower prices when we saw attractive valuations, and we deployed about a net eight percentage points of cash in the Clarkston Fund. This positively contributed to performance during the quarter ended March 31, 2019, as share prices marched steadily higher. As we enter April, prices are higher and we are once again facing the difficulty of identifying attractive opportunities based on valuations. Patience is back in vogue at Clarkston Capital.

Even as we wait for opportunities that meet our valuation criteria to put the Fund's cash to work, we have been diligent in our examination of businesses. Our recent research projects have focused on capital allocation, particularly as it relates to maturing companies; those with moderating end market growth. While some investors shy away from slowing growth, we tend to celebrate these businesses; especially in those cases where companies age with grace.

The primary challenge for maturing businesses is management acceptance that they are no longer growth companies. The executive skills that were required to grow the businesses are no longer as valuable to a mature, slow-growth business, especially as it relates to capital allocation. In a growing business, internal investment opportunities are more abundant, and the risk of failure is often warranted given the potential returns. Because there are fewer growth opportunities for mature businesses, management must allocate capital elsewhere. Internal investments may transition from growth projects to projects focused on strengthening competitive advantages, growing margins, and/or reducing the cash cycle (the time it takes to turn raw materials into cash). Shareholders of mature companies may benefit from capital returns via dividends and share repurchases. Some companies may even benefit from shrinking the business via divestitures or paying down debt.

There are several mature businesses in the Clarkston Fund's portfolio, including Anheuser-Busch InBev SA/NV (BUD). This company has dominant share in its core markets and is facing slowing growth. Over the past several months, we have spent considerable time analyzing this company and, overall, we are encouraged by the progress the business has made and how it has dealt with capital allocation decisions during its aging process.

Also during the quarter, the Clarkston Fund acquired the portfolio holdings and cash position of the Clarkston Select Fund in connection with the merger of the two Funds.

DISCLOSURES

An investor should consider investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses carefully before investing. Visit www.clarkstonfunds.com to obtain a Prospectus which contains this and other information, or call 1.844.680.6562. Read the Prospectus carefully before investing.

Risks: As with any mutual fund, there are risks to investing. There is no guarantee that the Fund will meet its investment objective. The Fund is non-diversified, which means that it may invest a significant portion of its assets in a relatively small number of issuers and could experience greater price volatility. The Fund will invest in equity securities. Equity securities (which generally include common stocks, preferred stocks, warrants, securities convertible into common or preferred stocks and similar securities) are generally volatile and more risky than some other forms of investment. Although the securities of larger companies may be less volatile than those of companies with smaller market capitalizations, returns on investments in securities of larger capitalization companies could trail the returns on investments in securities of smaller capitalization companies. Cash does not fluctuate with the market like stocks, and potentially bonds, but cash is subject to inflation risk. It is possible to lose money on an investment in the Fund. Investments in the Fund are not deposits or obligations of any bank, are not endorsed or guaranteed by any bank and are not insured or guaranteed by the U.S. government, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve Board or any other government agency. The Fund has limited operating history.

The Fund seeks long-term capital appreciation by investing primarily in equity securities of U.S. large-capitalization companies. The Fund primarily invests in companies with a market capitalization above that of the smallest company based on market capitalization in the S&P 500 Index at the time of initial purchase. The S&P 500 Index consists of 500 stocks and is used as a leading indicator of large-cap U.S. equity performance.

The Russell 1000[®] Index is a market capitalization weighted index that measures the performance of the large-capitalization sector of the U.S. stock market and includes the 1,000 largest stocks in the Russell 3000[®] Index. The Russell 3000[®] Index measures the performance of the largest 3,000 U.S. companies representing approximately 98% of the investable U.S. equity market. Index performance information was furnished by sources deemed reliable and is believed to be accurate, however, no warranty or representation is made as to the accuracy thereof and the information is subject to correction.
